Amaryah K. Bocchino is an experienced civil litigator who has represented national and regional clients in all aspects of litigation and national litigation management. She practices in the firm's Complex Litigation Practice Group and serves as the firm's managing partner and chief diversity officer. Amaryah maintains an extensive practice which focuses on products and premises liability, toxic tort litigation, and business and commercial disputes. Beyond this work, she serves in a national coordinating counsel role to a product manufacturer facing more than 30,000 asbestos cases, managing and supervising local and trial counsel across the country in defense of the company. She also serves as national coordinating counsel for multiple other smaller product manufacturers. Locally, she is Delaware counsel for a variety of insurance companies and local businesses in a wide variety of areas of litigation including employment, contract, bankruptcy, insurance, professional liability, environmental, and construction.

Amaryah provides key leadership and coordination to ensure that the firm's national clients receive optimal, efficient and coordinated legal services. She serves on the firm's Executive and Pro Bono Committees, as well as the Diversity, Equity, Inclusion + Belonging (DEIB) Partner Committee, DEIB Roundtable, and Women's Forum, which she founded in an effort to ensure that women and minorities are represented and equally contributing to the firm's governance committees and client engagements. She works daily with the firm's DEIB director and the DEIB Partner Committee to develop programs and resources for the firm community. Each year, Amaryah leads the firm's efforts to achieve Diversity Lab's Mansfield Rule Plus Certification.

In the broader legal community, Amaryah oversees the firm's engagement with organizations promoting diversity, equity, inclusion and belonging, such as the Law Firm Antiracism Alliance and the Leadership Council for Legal Diversity (LCLD), of which she is a member. As an alumnus of LCLD's fellows program, she encourages senior associates and junior partners to participate. Learn more about diversity, equity, inclusion and belonging at MG+M.
