Overview

Dillon Aisenberg focuses his practice on evaluating, managing and resolving claims asserted against engineers, architects, and other design professionals in the construction industry. He brings a disciplined and strategic approach to navigating the complex liability issues that arise in design professional disputes, guiding clients through every stage of the claims process with clarity and precision. In addition, Dillon also provides comprehensive guidance and support to design professionals in the drafting, reviewing, and negotiating process for design and construction contracts, helping clients structure agreements that protect their interests and minimize exposure from the outset.

During law school, Dillon worked at the Brockton Public Defenders Office, a plaintiff side personal injury firm and as a law clerk at a litigation and general business law firm. Dillon also worked in Northeastern Law's Prisoners' Rights Clinic, where he represented individuals in parole hearings.
