Overview
Sarah Hunter focuses her practice on asbestos litigation.

Before joining MG+M, Sarah was an associate at an insurance defense firm. She also clerked for the St. Louis County Counselor's Office, a plaintiff's personal injury firm, and the Saint Louis University criminal defense clinic.

While in law school, Sarah was a member of the trial team, where she received the Everett Hullverson Award for oral advocacy. She also served as president of the Women Law Students' Association and as a faculty fellow for Yvette Liebesman.

After earning her BS in political science, and philosophy and religion from Nebraska Wesleyan University in 2019, Sarah worked at the Nebraska Pharmacists' Association, where she managed the statewide drug disposal program and developed a free naloxone distribution program for pharmacies across Nebraska. She later worked at Fiserv as a debit implementation analyst before attending Saint Louis University School of Law.

Sarah is a native of Omaha, Nebraska. In her spare time, she cheers for the Huskers, plays tennis, and spends time with her family.
